People often feel scared and nervous when they think about going to the dentist because of the sights, sounds, and feelings that come with it. A lot of people just skip their dental visits because they are afraid, which can hurt their oral health in the long run.

Nitrous Oxide comes in

An effective and safe sedative used to help patients relax during dentistry procedures is nitrous oxide, which is also known as "laughing gas." Some people feel calm and happy after breathing in this white and odorless gas. However, do not worry; it will not make you laugh so hard that you fall off the floor like a comic act.

Steps to Follow

How does this magic gas work? Your nose is covered by a small mask that lets the nitrous oxide in. It enters your bloodstream when you take it in and mixes with oxygen. This makes you feel calm and relaxed. You can quickly feel the effects of nitrous oxide once you start breathing it in and forget about them as soon as you take off your mask. This means that you can safely drive home from your meeting at Land O' Lakes Dental without problems.
