

Cells are the fundamental units of living organisms. Despite the apparent synchrony in cellular systems, even individual cells from the same cell line or tissue can present distinct genomes, transcriptomes, and epigenomes during cell division and differentiation. Therefore, it is necessary to isolate the cells for further analysis, which is valuable for diagnostics, biotechnological and biomedical research.