WHAT IS KUNDALI MATCHING?

Kundali matching, also known as horoscope matching or "kundali milan" in Vedic astrology, is a traditional practice in India that assesses the compatibility of two individuals before marriage. It is based on the belief that the positions of celestial bodies at birth influence a person's life and character. Here's how Kundali matching works:

Creation of Kundalis: Each person has their own Kundali, a detailed astrological birth chart. A Kundali is created by plotting the positions of the sun, moon, planets, and other celestial elements at the exact time and place of a person's birth.

Comparison of Kundalis: Kundali matching involves comparing the Kundalis of the prospective bride and groom. Astrologers assess the compatibility of these charts based on various factors, including the positions of key planets like Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, and Venus, as well as the moon.

Guna Milan: The most common method of Kundali match for marriage is "Guna Milan," which assigns points to different aspects of the charts, such as the position of the moon in various houses, the presence of specific doshas (afflictions), and the compatibility of the birth stars (nakshatras). The total points obtained indicate the level of compatibility.

Assessment of Doshas: Kundali matching also involves checking for "doshas" or planetary afflictions, such as Mangal Dosha (related to Mars) and Nadi Dosha (related to the birth stars). The presence of doshas can be considered incompatibilities that may need remedies or special considerations.

Result Interpretation: Based on the points and factors considered, astrologers interpret the compatibility between the prospective couple. Higher points suggest better compatibility, while lower points may indicate potential challenges.

Kundali matching assesses various relationship aspects, including emotional, intellectual, physical, and spiritual compatibility. Many people in India consider it an important step before marrying because they believe a harmonious alignment of astrological energies can lead to a more prosperous and blissful marriage.

How many Gunas should match in Horoscope Match?

In Kundali matching, a total of 36 Gunas or points are considered, and the ideal scenario is to have a high number of Gunas match between the horoscopes of the prospective bride and groom. The number of Gunas that should match for a successful horoscope match varies, and it is generally determined based on the total score obtained through the process of Guna Milan.

Here's a general guideline for the significance of the total Guna score and its implications:

Below 18 Points: A total Guna score of less than 18 is considered low compatibility, and the match is often discouraged. It is believed to indicate significant differences and challenges in the relationship.

18 to 24 Points: This range is considered a moderate level of compatibility. While it's not an ideal match, it's not necessarily a cause for concern. Couples falling in this range may need to work on understanding and adapting to each other's differences.

25 to 32 Points: A Guna score within this range is considered a good match with a reasonable level of compatibility. Such couples are likely to have a harmonious relationship, though it may still require some effort to make the marriage successful.

33 Points or Above: A Guna score of 33 or higher is considered an excellent match with high compatibility. This indicates a strong alignment of astrological energies and suggests a promising and harmonious marital relationship.

What can be done if Kundalis do not match?

If Kundali (astrological charts) do not match, it doesn't necessarily mean you should not marry. Consult an astrologer for guidance and potential remedies. Focus on your compatibility, open communication, and mutual understanding. Consider pre-marital counselling and trust your instincts. The decision to marry should also consider practical and emotional factors, as successful marriages are built on mutual respect, trust, and working together.
