

Local toxicity evaluation is used to study the toxic reactions caused by topical administration and is an important part of toxicology studies. Our company offers comprehensive services and technical support covering every stage of preclinical rare disease therapy research and development, designed to help our clients address possible barriers and challenges in local toxicity evaluation for rare diseases.