

Revealing the reasons: Why Women Choose to Become Surrogates

BY – RITE OPTIONS

INTRODUCTION

For intended parents, deciding to pursue surrogacy is a significant and life-altering choice that comes with a number of concerns and uncertainties. Understanding the reasons behind women's decision to become surrogates adds an essential depth to this intricate and emotional process, going beyond the specifics of gestational surrogacy and the decision to engage with a surrogacy agency. At The Rite Options, we explore the various motivations for women choosing to take the remarkable route of becoming surrogates.

1. Beyond Monetary Compensation

It is a myth to attribute a surrogate's objectives exclusively to money. The choice to become pregnant and give birth on behalf of another person is motivated by a strong sense of charity and a sincere wish to improve the lives of the intended parents.

2. Empathy and Compassion

Understanding that for some people, surrogacy is the only practical route to parenting, surrogates are motivated by a sense of obligation to ease the burdens of others. This empathy goes so far as to assist single males or same-sex couples in fulfilling their desire to become biological fathers, underscoring the multifarious and altruistic reasons for surrogacy.

3. Enjoyment of Pregnancy

Some surrogates are drawn to the process because they find pregnancy to be a true delight. These women are motivated by the positive parts of pregnancy, such the special sense of feeling the baby kick. Their desire to share the joy of pregnancy with individuals who might not otherwise have the chance led them to decide to become surrogates.

4. Personal Fulfillment and Connection

A special path to personal fulfilment and deep interpersonal connections is provided by surrogacy. The relationship that is formed between intended parents and surrogates is more than just a business deal; it is a cooperative endeavour to realise aspirations and start families. Women who choose to become surrogates are highly motivated by this sense of connection and purpose.
