Why It's a Good Friday to Order Catering From ezCater

One of the most widely commemorated dates on the Christian calendar is the Friday before Easter Sunday, which is known as Good Friday. It's also called Holy Friday, Great Friday, and Black Friday, and it marks the crucifixion of Jesus.

Traditionally, it's a day of penance and fasting. More commonly, it's a day on which Christians avoid eating meat. But there are plenty of cuisines that are still on the table, so to speak, and many choose to mark Good Friday by sharing a meal with their loved ones.

Some choose to take this day off work, but if you're spending the day at the office, Good Friday is a great opportunity to order corporate catering from ezCater and gather with your office teammates.

Here are a few reasons why Good Friday is a prime opportunity to use ezCater and have your local favorites delivered.

Good Friday and Fish

As you may know, fish is the one exception to the rule about not consuming meat on Good Friday. That makes fish a prime option for anyone ordering lunch catering for the office.

From seafood stew to baked fish, salmon-topped salads, and other options, there's plenty to choose from, even on a day when other meats aren't on the menu.

Vegetarian and Vegan Options

If seafood isn't your thing, or you're working a little harder to observe Lent, going vegetarian for Good Friday is another option.

Some people even choose to fast on Good Friday. Of course, we all have different schedules, nutritional requirements, and other considerations, so ultimately, how you observe Good Friday is entirely up to you.
